These Will Be Holiday Hints.

Parlor, Dining Room and Bed Room Furniture Departments provide the interesting store news for the week's beginning. There's a hint of the "overcrowded" selling of the past week, which so quickly reduced the stock-with the addition of many items not previously specially priced. But all are the very newest of the new, and every piece has the attraction which a largely reduced price carries with it.

A DISGRACE TO WASHINGTON. The Frightful Travesty of Justice in the Tharp Case.

To the Editor of The Evening Star:

Allow me through your columns to call the attention of the citizens of Washington to the frightful travesty on justice which has disgraced this city during the past week. I allude to the acquittal of the man Tharp, on trial for murder. There is no dispute about the facts. He went into the 6th street railroad station and demanded to pass through the gates. On being very properly refused, he drew a revolver, shot the policeman at the gate and then began firing all around him, killing another man and narrowly escaping several other mur-

For these crimes, for which he most thoroughly deserved hanging, if ever a man did, he was tried last week—and acquitted. A jury was actually found so devoid of common sense and conscience as to set him free. But this was not all. It would seem that civilization and the common weal had still a refuge against turning loose this criminal on the community to recommence his shootings. There was the district attorney—the representative of justice. He might indict the man for wounding the officer, at least. But no! He decides that of the cannot convict for murder he cannot do so for assault. By what reasoning? we might well ask. If one jury has failed to do its duty, does it follow that another will necessary be derelict? If a man cannot be convicted of one thing, may he not be of another? No, says the district attorney, and he proceeds to ask the judge to ney, and he proceeds to ask the judge to ney, and he proceeds to ask the judge to set the criminal free.

But, fortunately, the people have still another defender. There is this judge. Will he not denounce this opera bouffe justice and compel the district attorney, through his very indignation, to proceed? No again. Note the impressive picture. The account says (I hope it is inaccurate) that the murderer steps up to the bench and is shaken by the hand by the very judge himself, and he leaves the court after this congratulation presumably with his tongue in his cheek and his ready revolver bulging his cheek and his ready revolver bulging his pocket. Why not? He has only come here from a far-off state to kill a man or two. from a far-off state to kill a man or two. He might just as well have killed your wife and children. Oh, reader, had they been in the station while he was firing wildly about him! For my part, I cannot help wishing some of the jurymen who acquitted him had been there at the time. The murdered man and the wounded officer might then have acquired some importance in their eyes by comparison with the prute. their eyes by comparison with the brute who shot them. And if a few of the jury had only been wounded, the miserable sen-timentality which was lavished upon them in appeals to remember the wife and child of the prisoner might have lacked some But still there is something further, Perhaps the public can depend upon the police, in the last resort, to protect them from the released murderer. But will it be credited released murderer. But will it be credited that just at this moment (unless all reports are false), the police are busy circulating a p tition to the President to prevent another murderer from being hanged! I refer to the man Horton, who was lately convicted of cutting a woman's throat in a public square in this city, and then stamping upon her writhing body. It is said, I repeat, (and has not been contradicted), that the police of Washington are actually signing a petition, not for justice, but for grace to this fiend! Well, why not? If juries practically proclaim to the world that it is less a crime to murder in a crowded station less a crime to murder in a crowded station than to steal a pocket handkerchief; if they, in substance, invite any one with homicidal tendencies to choose Washington for his game preserve, and pot his victims here, why should not the police think rather of begging off the criminals than of preserve a chizang. protecting the citizens' protecting the clizens?

All this has occurred, not, as one might suppose, in the topsy-turvy adventures of "Alice in Wonderland," but in the capital of the United States, in the year of light and reason, 1809. I do not hesitate to say that it, and a hundred like cases, which could be cited, set a deep and damning black mark upon our civilization. Today hundreds of murdered men lie cold in their graves, while their wives and children sink graves, while their wives and children sink late poverty and obscurity. And all the while their murderers are flourishing about the streets of our cities, unwhipped of jus-tice, because of that wretched and con-temptible good nature, on which, forsooth, we Americans pride ourselves, that nerve-less lack of principle which emasculates all our moral energies and makes our tears fall thick at the sufferings of criminals, while we forget their dead and buried

Mr. Editor, I call all this (and there are as I do, a denial of justice, a burlesque on civilization, a stigma on the sacred name of law, here at the very inmost temple and altar of that august figure. If it stood alone it would be terrible enough in the re-flections awakened. But it is only one of flections awakened. But it is only one of a multitude of proofs that a deepseated disease is gnawing at the vitals of our republic—a disease which shows itself in recklessness and carelessness as to whether justice is done and human life held sacred. I venture to say that there is not another so-called civilized country where such travesties on right could be witnessed in slience. And if the citizens are silent on whom can the country depend to protest against this terribly wrong condition of things? When crime, and more particularly the crime of murder, goes unavenged, as it so frequently does among us, the very as it so frequently does among us, the very foundations of our whole political and

Walter Bowman, the three-year-old son of Mrs. Edith Bowman, who keeps house for Mr. Hamilton Belt, near Unity, this county, met with an accident yesterday morning, from the effects of which he died about noon. About 7:30 o'clock Mrs. Bowman started a fire in the fireplace, and went to the barn to do the milking, leaving the little one alone in the room. While the mother was gone the child's clothing in some way became ignited, and he was frightfully burned. A gentleman who heard the screams went to his assistance and extinguished the flames. INTERFERES WITH TRAFFIC. Inspector Reports Too Many Hacks at a Stand.

The hack inspector, Mr. A. R. Lamb, was recently directed by the District Commissioners to keep the public vehicles on the hack stand on Pennsylvania avenue between 11th and 12th streets back of the building line of D street, so as not to interfere with pedestrians passing along Pennsylvania avenue on the south side. vehicles occupying the stand in the position indicated without seriously interfering with traffic on D street. He has, therefore, suggested that the number of vehicles be reduced from six to four, and that the other two be placed on the north side of D street immediately parallel with the curb. The inspector also suggests the establishment of a stand for four vehicles on the west side of 11th street immediately south of Pennsylvania avenue, to stand parallel with the curb, the city postmaster, the inspector states, offering no objection. DEATH OF OFFICER HOWE.

Member of Metropolitan Police Force for Thirty-one Years. Policeman John T. Howe of the fifth precinet, who was stricken with paralysis Tuesday morning while on duty at C street and Arthur place in connection with the work on the Tiber creek sewer, as published in Tuesday's Star, died yesterday afternoon at his home, No. 421 8th street southeast. The deceased had served thirtyone consecutive years as a member of the police department, and there are very few men now on the force who have served a longer period. He fell on the street at the time he was stricken, and became unconscious soon afterward. He did not regain consciousness before he died.

Policeman Howe was always regarded as an excellent officer, and on a number of oc-casions showed his bravery. His death re-calls to the older members of the police force the election riots which occurred the year before Congress abolished suffrage. The riot at 13th and K streets northwest was the one in which Howe figured. At that time Major A. C. Richards was chief of police and be was called upon to proof police, and he was called upon to pro-tect a colored man named Charles Stewart. who wanted to vote the democratic ticket Major Richards said he would give him the necessary protection, and when Stewart appeared at the polls to cast his vote the appeared at the poils to cast his vote the trouble began. Pistol shots were fired and the police were called upon to use their clubs. One of the bullets passed through the carriage of a United States senator, who was on his way to the Capitol, and this incident, it is believed, played an important part in the subsequent change of the form of government. Two men died portant part in the subsequent change of the form of government. Two men died from the effects of the wounds received during the riot, and a colored man named Smith from Baltimore, who was shot through the head, recovered. He was shot by Policeman 'Polly' Hopkins, who saw a pistol pointed in the direction of Major Richards' head.

In this riot the late Policeman Howe took an important part, and it was due to his courageous conduct that more serious trouble was averted. While he was always a courageous officer, Howe's great weight was always against his being as active as he might otherwise have been. It was only a few months ago that he was reduced to he might otherwise have been. It was only a few months ago that he was reduced to class one and given a detail. He preferred this to being placed on the retired list. Major Sylvester issued an order today announcing the officer's death. A detail of twenty-four men will be made to attend the funeral, which will take place Monday afternoon. day afternoon.

ELABORATE PREPARATIONS. The Goldenberg Stores Ready for the Holiday Trade.

The advent of the holiday season turns the thoughts of all to the city's shops, and these establishments are just now taking on an aspect of wonderful activity. Espe cially is this noticeable in the case of the Goldenberg stores at Nos. 922, 924, 926 and 928 7th street, and 704 and 706 K street northwest, where preparations more elaborate than ever before in the history of this commercial institution have been madfor an immense season of holiday buying and selling. The agents of this establish ment have been scattered throughout the wholesale marts several months past en wholesale marts several months past engaged in collecting what is today as fine and complete a stock of goods as any department store in the country carries.

The growth of the Goldenberg house has been one of marve ous and rapid success, due to the consideration with which customers have invariably been treated in regard to both prices and attention. From a beginning of but one store the establishment now embraces four buildings on 7th street and two on K street—around the conner—all stocked with the best classes of goods. The secret of this wonderful growth and advancement lies in the policy and ner—all stocked with the best classes of goods. The secret of this wonderful growth and advancement lies in the policy and ability of Mr. Goldenberg to undersell competitors for similar values. The ability to do this is not involved in a problem. It is simple. The Goldenberg dependable store does a strictly cash business, there being absolutely no deviation from this rule. The capital of the establishment is thus kept in active operation and is never tied up in outstanding credits. There is still another factor in the success of this establishment; it is that whenever Mr. Goldenberg has been able to make a purchase at reduced figures he has always given customers the benefit of this sagactous buying in giving that he secured in the wholesale transaction. The public is given the advantage of every buying opportunity that is presented. The interest of the customer, Mr. Goldenberg declares, and not his own personal gain, has been the aim and policy of the store. The success of the establishment has attested the truth of the statement. has attested the truth of the statement. The designation of Goldenberg's as " Dependable Store" is continually justi It is a dependable store in fact as well as in name. A policy has always been in vogue here to refund money if the goods are not satisfactory in every respect. This is not an idle promise, but a fact. Every customer is treated with politeness and courtesy by the thoroughly competent corps of managers and clerks, and never has cause for the slightest complaint. "This is a dependable store in reality," said Mr. Goldenberg today, "and we believe the people of Washington know and appreciate

The holiday season finds the Goldenberg stock larger and more complete in all de-partments than ever before. In the line of cloaks, suits, mill nery and dress goods the stock is exceptional in many respects. The latest styles and fashionable features are apparent in every garment, every bonnet, while the reigning shades and qualities are represented in the dress ciaths. Special stress must be laid upon the housefurnishing department, where there is every-thing needful in the parlor, dining room, library, hall or chamber. The show of lamps and art in china is much more elab-ornate than ever before, special attention having been paid to this. at present in the Goldenberg establishmen a stock of distinctively gift goods, an extraordinary effort having been made to secure a supply of holiday stuff to please every purchaser. In sterling silver ware and jewelry of all sorts, in games, toys, dolls, books and all descriptions of things suitable for gifts, the store abounds. These goods are to be sold, it is promised, lower than any other house can afford to mark
